We rejoice to hear that Judge Advocate General Holt is preparing the documents for a court martial in the case of General Milroy, charged with evacuating Winehester with cowardly precipitation, leaving millions' worth of arms, ammunitions, &c., to the rebels, and sacrificing the bulk of his command to save his own neck. We do not know nor judge that he did other than his whole duty in the premises. We trust that he will have a fair, impartial trial, and be honorably acquitted if the tial trial, and be honorably acquitted if the an able, clear headed logical speaker, and an partial trial, and be honorably acquitted if the facts will warrant; but, if he be proved guilty, we trust he will be inexoriably shot.

That will be a light penalty for the offences of which he stands accused. We shall gladly see him vindicated; but, if he is guilty, we pray the Court and President to have merey Rebel reports charge Mrs. Milroy (wife of General aforesaid) with having appropriated to her own use and wear the dresses of secesmon ladies resident in (but probably fugitives from) Winchester. We shall not believe this until proved beyond question; but if she ever did so base a thing, we trust (since the precipitate flight of her husband left her in the hands of the rebels) she will be indicted as a thief.

of the rebels) she will be indicted as a thief, tried as a thief, convicted as a thief, and punished as a thief. It will do her a world of good.—New York Tribune.

We find the above copied into the Cincinnati Commercial, and as it has passed through two bitter Republican papers, we suppose we may venture to make use of it.

The story is not all told, however, and, as fence of such a rotten and effect institution as poss we may venture to make use of it.

The story is not all told, however, and, as we have been assured, these are the facts:—
The house, one of the finest in Winchester, and best furnished, was occupied by a ledy and her daughter, when Gen. Milroy and wife went thers. To secure it for himself, he ordered the ledy and her daughter "across the lines." The daughter, a young woman grown, was very ill, and her physicians said she could not bear the removal without endangering her life. But Gen. Milroy was not to be put off in that way, and peremptorily demanded the removal made, and permitted them to take nothing with them but what they had on their backs.

All was deplated and unchristian whose waged in defence of such a rotten and effete institution as the Turkish Empire, which maintains slavery, and is therefore he fit member of the comity of nations. He is not aware while speaking, that two officers of the Grenadier Guards, disguised in citizen's attire, have been sent to the meeting by the War-office to take notes of his speech, and, having ended his oration amid the enthusiastic applause of his audience, goes home to supper. A few nights afterwards, thinking no evil, and believing himself to be a citizen of a free country, he retires quietly to bed as usual. But his sleep is not permitted to be of long duration. Shortly he is aroused by a violent knocking at the outer door. He backs.

He and Mrs. Milroy then occupied the resdy furnished premises. Mrs. Milroy is not only charged with wearing the ladies drasses left behind, and using every article of furniture, but with packnig up the silver ware to take home with her to Indiana. This was the state of affairs when Milroy left, and in such hot haste that he forgot his wife, allver ware and all, and they fell into the hands of Confederates.

But why does the Tribune and Commercial now, at this late day, set up a shudder at conduct they have so leudly applauded until after Gen. Lee get into Pennsylvania? We hope the Commercial will ascertain the facts and state whether Col. Stanley Matthews, now a "Joyal league" Judge of Cincinnati, did not send. from Tennessee, a set of silver plates to his wife, which Mrs. M. refused to receive; but placed it in a bank in the city to await its owner's demand, if ever found after the war is over. And if so, if this act did not win applance sufficient to place the actor in a post of high Judicial, trust?

We hope the Commercial will not sing

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe costiceness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promotives of the natural secretion when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to oleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.
